ROGER LEWIS

The Conquest Of Dough

A Long Story Short , 3 Epic Poems and some trifles.

Copyright © 2024 by Roger Lewis

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, scanning, or otherwise without written permission from the publisher. It is illegal to copy this book, post it to a website, or distribute it by any other means without permission.

First edition

This book was professionally typeset on Reedsy.
Find out more at reedsy.com

To Arby, Ken and Charles and all those others who didn't make it.

´´To reason well it is necessary to possess such virtues as intellectual honesty and sincerity and a real love of truth. The cause of the success of scientific inquirers has been that the motive which has carried them to the laboratory and the field has been a craving to know how things were. Genuine inquiry consists in diligent inquiry into truth for truth's sake. In drawing the bow upon truth with intentness in the eye & energy in the arm.

CHARLES SANDERS PIERCE
We Pragmatists, Hack

Contents

Foreword iv
Preface vi
QUEUE HERE. SISYPHUS, QUE OF CUES, CUE QUE, COUP DE QUE. vi
Acknowledgement viii
NOTES ON AN OLD FIDDLE. (FOR JOHANNA, I LOVE YOU.) viii
1 Chapter 1 1
2 Chapter 2 4
Maybe its all about the Accounting system, Is it Babylonian did you say? 4
3 Chapter 3 7
A Word Fittingly Spoken 7
4 Chapter 4 9
Aleppo, Syria. 9
5 Chapter 5 11
The Last Bakery in Aleppo. 11
6 Chapter 6 15
Preparing for Damascus 15
7 Chapter 7 17
The Road to Damascus. 17
8 Chapter 8 22
Actualitie and other Economical Escapades. A riddle. 22

9 Chapter 9 27
The Sky is Falling In 27
10 Chapter 10 30
Ground Control to Major Tom. 30
11 Chapter 11 38
Incitatus riddles the Forum 38
12 Chapter 12 42
A Sketch from the UN General Assembly. 42
13 Chapter 13 46
Translators False Horses of the enlightenment 46
14 Chapter 14 48
Zenophobia: the irrational fear of convergent sequences. 48
15 Chapter 15 53
Wheat and the Chess Board. 53
16 Chapter 16 55
Greta Says it's all to do with Climate. Yep the climate of BS. 55
17 Chapter 17 59
A corbinistas refrain 59
18 Chapter 18 63
Radishes and Dildos - A Historical Romp, The Classical Scholar Bufoon 63
19 Chapter 19 66
Going Direct Paradigm Spring of 2024! Deja Vu all over again, Talking bout a revolution. 66
20 Chapter 20 70
Usury Hell's Fuel Mans Oppressor. 70
COUNSEL FOR THE PEOPLE CHARGE USURY OF ITS CRIMES. 79

21 Chapter 21 84
Bourgeois resolution. 84
A poem in Three Voices for added 4th part Harmony. 84
22 Chapter 22 93
Globalisation Un-Entangled. 93

Foreword

My essay "Why are we here?" is a thought-provoking exploration prompted by David Malone's documentary series,of the same name. The essay delves into the four films in the series, namely "Meaning Seeking Beings," "The Reality of Ideas," "The Animal Within," and "The Moral Compass." It also delves into the complexities of existence, the pursuit of knowledge, and the interplay between science, philosophy, and ethics.

Sometimes one can not but reflect on the fundamental question of human existence and the quest for meaning. We must express a genuine curiosity about the purpose of life and the nature of our existence. It is unavoidable to also touch upon the limitations of human understanding and the vastness of the unknown, forcing one into acknowledging that universals escape our imagination and perception.

The interplay between science and philosophy poses questions of whether the scientific method or art is more effective in communicating the essence of the unknown or immeasurable. If one contemplates the coexistence of materialism and idealism, it can be helpful to reject the notion that they are mutually exclusive and advocate for a broader perspective that transcends traditional dichotomies.

Ethical considerations in both scientific and religious inquiries highlight the importance of ethical frameworks in shaping human behavior and decision-making, emphasizing the pursuit of virtue for the general well-being of society.

The role of tradition and authority in shaping knowledge systems draws on historical and philosophical perspectives to underscore the complex interplay between tradition, belief, and inquiry. philosophical thinkers, such as Michel Foucault, Neal Donald Walsh, and C.S. Pierce, enrich our arguments and provide a comprehensive examination of epistemological and ethical considerations.

The impact of urbanization on evolution and ecosystem function, linking scientific inquiry to broader societal implications underscores the need for humility and context in scientific education. Recent elite hubris should serve as a caution against propagandistic approaches in both science and religion.

A pause for profound reflection on the complexities of human existence, the pursuit of knowledge, and the ethical considerations can underpin both scientific and religious inquiries. I would encourage readers to embrace a holistic perspective that transcends traditional boundaries, fostering a deeper understanding of the interconnectedness between science, philosophy, ethics, and human experience.

Preface

QUEUE HERE. SISYPHUS, QUE OF CUES, CUE QUE, COUP DE QUE.

Sisyphus pushed his boulder,
The path smooth both ways
The same incline repeated
Parmenides like determination.
—
Prometheus chained over the hill
Willing that Sisyphus may succeed panta rhei, alike to his own flame.
Both legends for deaf ears.
—
Heraclitus his ebb and flow
Crying metaphors to deaf masses
Sobbing similes to Blind tyranny
Calvary the summit to that bluff.
—
Maimonides saw each contradiction
Each species of deafness, Loud
Each species of blindness, Dark
All no less perplexed than the next.

—

Yet another Sisyphus rolls
Yet another Prometheus reveals
Yet another Heraclitus cry's
Yet another Maimonides interprets

—-

Ancient and modern queuing
Missed cues and repeated lines
A dialogue of the divine comedy
Stockaded in linguistic prison walls.

—-

Plus ca change plus ca meme chose.

Acknowledgement

I started writing this Book back in 2017, I worked on it solidly for two years and have revisited it over the 5 years since then perusing and thinking it over, Tonight I decided I should finish it and just accept the incompleteness and abstractness of it.

Life is a work in progress and no novel or poem can ever be finished the words should continue to flow as thoughts informing memory, thoughts feelings, and deeds even into eternity.

I wrote a poem to my Wife several years ago about the difficulties of communicating in the same language but informed by different cultures and mother tongues..

June 26, 2018

NOTES ON AN OLD FIDDLE. (FOR JOHANNA, I LOVE YOU.)

Notes on an Old Fiddle.

I wrote a note, about the key, you needed the information so you could meet me at the pitch on time.
This was not the first wrong Note, it will not be the last, I did not know you didn't read perhaps I should have told you instead.
it's something about our communication, What is missing from our relationship, why do we not hear each other?

Perhaps we can solve this equation, seek some resolution why must I march when you are dancing?
Your Tangos sound like Dirges for me.

I might have seemed sharp to you, that joke I told fell flat in the wrong company. The symphony you sought was beyond the scope of the Duet I had planned.
If I were to Score that goal again, perhaps I would not repeat the same notes so often. Variations on a broken theme? Perhaps a fresh Page needs to be turned.
Your melody always haunts me as I hum that tune you used to sing in carefree moments and when you put the children to bed.
I never seem to get it quite right, I will ask you to sing it again I wonder if it is wise to leave that message in another note?

By Way of acknowledgment, I still Love you Johanna and to my two Children Rhiannon and Rasmus, my world didn't exist before you and I can not imagine a world that could be complete without you both in it.

1

Chapter 1

> The wise king said, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in vessels of silver" (Prov. xxv. 11). Hear the explanation of what he said:—The word maskiyoth, the Hebrew equivalent for "vessels," denotes "filigree network"—i.e., things in which there are very small apertures, such as are frequently wrought by silversmiths. They are called in Hebrew maskiyoth (lit. "transpicuous," from the verb sakah, "he saw," a root which occurs also in the Targum of Onkelos, Gen. xxvi. 8), because the eye penetrates through them. Thus Solomon meant to say, "just as apples of gold in silver filigree with small apertures, so is a word fitly spoken."
>
> Maimonides, A Guide for the Perplexed.

Introduction.

As the Low Hanging Fruit rots, the true believers and credulous continued to grasp at the unseen upper branches of the tree of myth and ideology: clutching further, and stretching longer, extending their reach by any means, even means unimaginable to anyone but the desperate and deluded. They knew that the Golden Apple, no one had ever seen, or, produced evidence of its existence was there, just beyond their furthest reach, Just out of sight of their keenest glance, so as the Low-Hung Fruit still rotted having ripened and yet not nourished those for whom only the Perfection of the Golden Fruit of pure ideological reified hubris would ever be enough. The obvious went ignored its goodness rejected in the pursuit of the impossible promises of soothsayers, priests, mountebanks, politicians Fifth Avenue suits, and City Bankers, so many lies clothed in so many promises taking hope and optimism and producing a pathetic belief in the bounties of the Noble Lie.

And here we see the Autumn of a civil war where men women and children have perished, their death caused by what some in years to come will say was due to the Mythical invasion of the sea peoples. Which, Historical Turning of a 21st-century Ideologue would find its analog in Aleppo Syria to the Firestorms and Privations of the Bronze Age collapse in 1150 BC. And what do these two disparate events and the Low Hanging Fruit and the Apple of Gold wrapped in Filigree of silver have to do with our business here in our thoughts and investigations in these coming pages we will surely find out and discover together as we look at the scenes that play out before us together we will in our mind's eye trace the steps of Ahmed Abdul Hittite the Bakers son of Aleppo who was sent abroad again to seek refuge for the secret of his Guild to be perpetuated in a Bond millennia Old and passed down from Father to Son along with the Secrets of the precious alchemy from which his family had sustained Egyptian Pharaohs through to the Palace in Damascus of President Assad and Sultans, Pashas and great Kings and Queens of yore in the Cradle of civilisation, Damascus even before Abraham had Spoken of Gods word Already ancient when Jesus Christ Was a Boy and Older Still when the prophet Mohammed Received the Holy Quran. For Abdul's mission and the secret recipe was the secret of Dough, the Sacred Dough of Aleppo from which all Leavened Bread had been exported as an Idea and a Method, yet only the Hittite Sour Dough of the Hittite Bakery of Aleppo was the true source and substance of the Greatest most sacred and honored Starter, the eminence, and fountainhead of The Bakers Craft, tied to antiquity and bound to the most Trusted and to a Brotherhood of world Wide civilisation where there was Trade there was Counting to be done and accounts to be settled where merchants would Seal their Bargains with the breaking of Bread and the Dipping of Bread in Salt and where the secrets of the alchemies of Commerce were held deepest and closest the Hittite bread would serve to mark, The Conquest of Dough. Where all could bake and break bread hewn from the earth of Mother Nature's bounty, the true source of the wealth of man in nature.

2

Chapter 2

Maybe its all about the Accounting system, Is it Babylonian did you say?

> In a land of genealogical confusion and fictitious tables, where elephants are being stuffed into refrigerators and politicians play pianos in brothels, a comedy of errors unfolds.

Once upon a time, in a world where mathematicians tried to fit elephants into refrigerators using complex theorems, an Italian politician took a friend home to meet his mother. Little did the friend know that the politician's mother had high notions of decency and respectability. The politician had kept his political career a secret from his mother, for fear of shocking her. In fact, he had told her that he played the piano in a brothel, as he believed that was far more respectable.

Meanwhile, in a parallel universe, a group of statisticians were conducting experiments to determine if it was possible to put an elephant into a refrigerator. The bright statistician confidently declared that it could be done by using the elephant's tail as a sample and saying "Done." The dull statistician, on the other hand, repeated the experiment, pushing the elephant into the refrigerator, much to the dismay of the poor elephant.

Back in the land of topsy-turvy topology, mathematicians were busy trying to make refrigerators with Klein bottles and turning elephants inside out. The absurdity of trying to fit an elephant into a refrigerator was not lost on them, as they pondered whether the elephant's mother could fit inside the refrigerator if cremated.

As the chaos continued, a group of musicians in Chicago sang about "The Dirty Dozen" and "Honky Tonk Blues," while King Jelly Roll Morton described the freakish center of Chicago where uncultured sayings and sex appeal abounded. The absurdity of the situation was evident as they sang about mamma's with no drawers and dirty dozens.

Amidst all this madness, a mathematician pondered how to put an elephant into a refrigerator using differentiating, integrating, and redefining measures. Meanwhile, an Italian politician's story about playing the piano in a brothel seemed tame compared to the antics of the mathematicians and musicians.

The world is indeed a strange and absurd place, where elephants are squeezed into refrigerators using mathematical theorems, politicians play pianos in brothels, and statisticians conduct experiments with elephants and refrigerators. The only thing left to do is laugh at the absurdity of it all and enjoy the comedic chaos that ensues.

3

Chapter 3

A Word Fittingly Spoken

Ah, the wise king's words about apples of gold in vessels of silver. It's like trying to reach for the unattainable, isn't it? The low-hanging fruit rots, yet the believers and the credulous still strive for the elusive golden apple, stretching and grasping beyond their means. It's like a comedy of errors, with people ignoring the obvious goodness right in front of them in pursuit of unattainable promises from soothsayers, priests, and politicians.

And then we have the civil war, where men, women, and children perish, all in the name of mythical invasions and historical turning points. It's like a tragicomedy unfolding before our eyes, with events from different eras intertwining in a bizarre dance.

But amidst all this chaos, there's the story of Ahmed Abdul Hittite, the baker's son on a mission to safeguard the ancient secret recipe of dough. It's like a thrilling adventure, with the sacred dough of Aleppo holding the key to centuries-old traditions and the wealth of civilization.

So, here we are, witnessing the conquest of dough, where the true source of wealth lies in the earth's bounty and the secrets of ancient alchemies. It's a tale of bread, brotherhood, and the unending quest for something more than just the low-hanging fruit. Let's embark on this journey together and uncover the mysteries of the sacred dough.

4

Chapter 4

Aleppo, Syria.

Ahmed, the master baker of Aleppo, found himself in a pickle, or should we say, in a jar covered in silver filigree. As he clutched the ancient glass vessel containing the sacred ceremonial dough, he realized that he was now the custodian of Aleppo's most closely guarded secret. This dough wasn't just any dough; it was the key to the sustenance of generations, a starter dough that traced its origins back to the dawn of civilization.

But before Ahmed could even wrap his head around the gravity of his situation, chaos ensued. The White Helmets, the mercenary army of the Black orders of usury, were hot on his trail. It was like a scene from an action movie, only with more dough and less explosions.

As Ahmed made a run for it, the White Helmet leader barked orders into his radio transmitter, calling for drone strikes and treating civilians as expendable. Talk about overreacting! It was as if they were after the secret recipe for world peace, or maybe just a really good loaf of bread.

In a fit of rage, the White Helmet emptied his magazine into the still warm corpse of Abdul's father, displaying a level of diplomacy that would make even the most seasoned diplomat cringe. And so, in the midst of all this chaos, Abdul's journey began in the last bakery in Aleppo.

It was a classic case of dough drama, with a sprinkle of political intrigue and a generous helping of absurdity. As Ahmed disappeared into the labyrinthine streets of Aleppo, he pondered the absurdity of it all. Who would have thought that a humble baker would find himself at the center of a high-stakes chase for a jar of sourdough starter?

And so, dear readers, as we bid adieu to Ahmed and his quest to safeguard the ancient dough, we can't help but wonder what other culinary capers await him. Will he emerge victorious, armed with nothing but a jar of dough and a heart full of determination? Only time will tell. But one thing's for sure – when it comes to bread and bravery, Ahmed is on the rise.

5

Chapter 5

The Last Bakery in Aleppo.

Abdul looked at the space where his father's head once sat upon his broad shoulders, the words his father had just spoken rung in his ears and he held in his hands a Jar Covered in Silver Filigree through which glistened the golden sheath within which an ancient Glass vessel held, beneath a Lid of fine ornamented jeweled blue lapis lazuli blue glass that shimmered as the Mediterranean sea off the beaches of the Mediterranean coast where Cyprus sat over the horizon. Within this sacred Vessel was the most sacred of ceremonial Dough's, the most secretly and jealously guarded of all Aleppo's secrets. More jealously protected down generations of his family, more so than the Codex of Aleppo's Central Synagogue the Site of the Cave of Elijah. This was history and the key to the sustenance of generations a direct line back to before history began, a starter dough born of the first undomesticated grains and the Yeast from the air breathed by the first civilisations of sedentary populations. These were the grains that formed the metrics for measurements from which the noble science of metrology sprang. Those grains defined the weights and measures of rations for the slaves of Pharaohs and are the origins of all measurements from which all science and mathematics became codified. The Grains that made this dough produced the sugars and the carbohydrates that nourished the bodies and fueled the thoughts of the mothers of all invention'. In his hands, Ahmed held a link back to the beginning of all that we know and all that we take for granted. And now it fell for him to take the Holy Sour Dough to a safe place far away, over many seas and lands to make good and redeem promises made long ago between contracting parties whose promises were sealed in blood and sacrifice and whose code had spread to the four corners of the world. Secrets now bleeding from the severed head of his Father yet locked still in the mind of His son who stood momentarily shocked.

He heard voices, The White Helmets, the mercenary army of the Black orders of usury, the challengers of the nobility of the dough.

An interrogation, a blast of machine gun fire, screams, more interrogations,

Ahmed knew he must move fast through the route known to his elite class of bakers to flee again the tumult that Aleppo had become. Fleeing a war about Monetary Hegemony and a war about Vested interests in the monopoly supply of necessities. They were looking for what he held in his hands the truth of Man's wealth and debt to agriculture and the universal access to and the production of Bread. The White Helmets were closing in he knew he must say his goodbyes and hold on to his grieving for later and hold onto the Vessel in his hands even tighter the freedom of Good and the freedom of all Men of all the holy books depended on his reaching the place of safety, he must retrace the route of civilisation and trade and ensure that the Dough of Life be spread again to the four corners of Humanity for as the Middle East burned and as the Powers of Finance Capital and Usury sought to extinguish the knowledge of Dough, the Brotherhood of bakers knew that as long as the idea of self-sufficiency and the Breaking of freshly baked bread lived, the Global domination of the means of sustenance and trade would always evade that Black-hearted breed of Man who would see orphans starve rather than yield control of the destinies of Nations and offend the nobility of populations.

He turned and ran.

As the White Helmet Leader rounded the Corner to the courtyard of the last Bakery in Aleppo, Ahmed had vanished as elusive as the fresh odour of newly baked bread invisibly seduces the senses, so Ahmed had evaporated the white Helmut cried out.

"Damn, there's the old guy, where's the son, Damn it".

He lifted the radio transmitter to his Mouth.

"White leader to Carrier Group One, Target on the run, Mission failed, advise telling Langley to alert Drone strike force to seek and destroy. Repeat Target at large, Advise arm Drones and seek and destroy, civilians expendable The Target is at large."

In a fit of Rage the White helmet turned and pointed his M 17 at the corpse of Abdul's father, emptied the magazine into the Still warm and not yet stiff corpse,

"Damn you, Fucking Rag-headed animal".

A picture of democracy early one morning in the last bakery in Aleppo, this is where our story and Abdul's Journey Begins.

6

Chapter 6

Preparing for Damascus

Ah, the escapades of Abdul and Elijah on the road to Damascus! It's like a scene straight out of a comedic action movie. Abdul, the breathless fugitive, and Elijah, the loyal brother in truth, embarking on a journey filled with danger and ancient traditions.

As they speed away in a Red Cross Jeep, dressed in Black Orthodox garb (quite the fashion statement for fugitives, don't you think?), they reminisce about their childhood days playing with children of all faiths in the ancient playgrounds. It's like a heartwarming reunion, except for the fact that they're fleeing from modern-day Caesars and being chased by drones.

And let's not forget about Jake Brown, the drone controller, who's basically the modern-day version of a nosy neighbor peeking through their curtains. "Red Cross Jeep headed West

Two Men on board" - it's like he's narrating their every move in a suspenseful thriller.

The banter between Abdul and Elijah is just priceless. They find humor even in the midst of grief and danger, laughing about Motherfucking Ismaylys and the Anzeyrs. It's like a buddy comedy where they're facing perilous situations, but still manage to crack jokes and reminisce about old family stories.

The journey itself is like a time machine, taking them through history and memories. From Aleppo to Damascus, they're tracing the footsteps of Sheikh Ibrahim Ibn Abdallah, a Swiss traveler who became famous for being the first Westerner to see the Fabled City of Petra. It's like a historical road trip with a touch of humor and a dash of adventure.

And let's not forget about the precious artifact of living breathing memory that they carry with them. It's like a plot twist in a heist movie, except instead of stealing a priceless artifact, they're protecting it and carrying it through ancient lands.

The whole story is like a blend of action, history, and comedy, with a sprinkle of wit and charm. It's like watching a buddy comedy set against the backdrop of ancient traditions and modern-day pursuits. Who knew fleeing from danger could be so entertaining?

7

Chapter 7

The Road to Damascus.

Abdul, breathless and sweating emerges from his escape route into Elijah's Cave. A well-learned and never-forgotten routine has started to play out. Told in Songs and Poems of the Elders and Forefathers. The rhythms and timbres of those ancient bonds inform the protectors of the sacred dough what they must do and where they must go. Each link in that sacred chain knows the melody of this saddest and most solemn of songs, a song of flight, a song of Terror, and a song of deeply bonded and grounded faith in the mutual respect of trades crafts, and guilds honouring credit and trust with mutual respect and protection. Elijah, son of Abraham and grandson of Ezikhil, kisses the Lapis Lazuli lid of the Sacred vessel and embraces his brother in truth.

" Brother, your father",

"He is dead, The White Helmets Came",

"You must hasten to Damascus brother. This embrace will not be our last. I will take you to a guide. You must put on these clothes and here are your papers. At Damascus, the Guide will take you to our safe house from where you will Go on to Cairo".

"Thank you, Elijah, how much time do we have".

"Oh, time enough Brother Abdul",

The two men had often played as boys a Jew and a Moslem, along with Christian children and all faiths living in peace in this most ancient of playgrounds, now reduced to ruins.

"Hey Abdul, are Fatima and the children safe",

"yes they are safe Brother"

"and Ruth and your boys, yes they are safe".

And so the journey starts on the road to Damascus, Elijah, and Abdul dressed in Black Orthodox garb Embark on the road to Damascus in a Red Cross Jeep over rubble and through ruined streets and along that ancient road. Both are lost in memories and both reciting poems and humming those old songs which bind them to a common tradition, feared by these modern Caesars who now pursue them.

Drone Control. Jake Brown looks at his remote monitoring screen which relays a picture from a drone 2000 meters above the Streets of Aleppo. He radios the white helmets,

"Red Cross Jeep headed West Two Men on board
Red Cross markings are they clear for evacuation"
.
"Affirmative Red Cross jeep Elijah Mordecai Rabi of East Aleppo cleared to travel with Assistant Rabbi; Fugitive must still have gone to ground."

And so our two fugitives follow the route of Samaritan fame, to Damascus Perhaps some history for this leg of the journey.

These Ceaser's that laid claim to the mother earth from which his family had grown and were a part of, Bonds to Stone Henge, Scapa Flow, Cairo, Alexandria through to North Africa, Ethiopia, Libya, Through The Greek Islands, and the Balkans Through Ukraine and the Urals Routes through which Agriculture and commerce and trade had spread with no wars of conquest until Ideology and Hubris had caused the Striving for the true believers, Zealots and Credulous to Reach into unseen branches for mythological Golden Apples which had never been produced and nor would they.

This Road to Damascus was a time machine of memories and it is those memories that bind all mankind in a brotherhood of common genesis where the Sense of Self can be found if only one learns to look and see that common bond beyond the Jealous ego of the Jealous priesthood of Conquests down the ages.

Conversation between the two had naturally been limited until out in the Countryside and headed away from the conflict area around Aleppo but familiar place names reminded Abdul of old family stories of the curious visitor to Aleppo in the year 1812. Sheikh Ibrahim Ibn Abdallah a Swiss Traveler versed in Arabic customs who would later become famous as the first Westerner to see the Fabled City of Petra in Jordan.

Although the atmosphere was heavy with the Grief of recent loss the two were accustomed to death and loss and felt a close kinship to their long and distant histories spanning Cultures, Ethnicity, and other egotistical constructs that men fabricate to gain imagined status. That breed of men who justify unimaginable claims against Territory and land they have not and can not ever know and feel as intimately as the indigenous peoples who mould and blend into their surroundings.

Abdul and Elijah knew a piece of Heaven on earth, an affinity of shared horizons felt by all aboriginals in intimate rhythm with and harmony to the Geography of their being.

"What a Guy the sheikh was Elijah, here is a signpost to Hamah, we are almost Half Way now."

"Those Motherfucking Ismaylys and the Anzeyrs, "

They both blurted out laughing

Both had heard the stories handed down by oral tradition and in songs and such feats of apparent super memory lost to those in the West, with short attention spans and even shorter Tempers who can now but look on in awe at those painted as backward in the media of Soundbites and distractions of the most inane trivia.

The two Fugitives with their precious artifact of living breathing memory back to the mists of time would lay over for the night at the same Castle that offered hospitality to the Swiss Traveler who adopted Arab Dress in his homeland and later indoctrinated to the Honorary Fellowship of Trade Craft Bakers who stood for a connection of peoples to their lands and referenced wealth to the Bounties of Nature and not the hard food of Midas currently rending asunder the lives of Millions of Syrians,

The Journey back in time would continue to Damascus in the morning and from there to Cairo and Alexandria. Where The story of the Grains that still lend their name to the smaller weight measure of the Gold those old and these new invaders seek to appropriate.

8

Chapter 8

Actualitie and other Economical Escapades. A riddle.

In a land far, far away, in a time not so nigh,
There was a tale of intrigue, with a dash of spy.
A story of emails, of warnings, and dread,
And a comedic twist that'll leave you in stitches, it's said.

So let us laugh at the madness, and revel in the absurd,
For in this tale of power and deception, comedy is the word.
With rhymes and wit aplenty, we'll spin a yarn so grand,
A story of love and laughter, in this comedic wonderland.

The plot thickens with a planted story, oh my,
A warning to those who dare defy.
A 'nere-do-gooder' high up on the pyramid's peak,
Protected from harm, oh the secrets they keep.

But fear not, my friends, for there's more to this tale,

A love letter to America, oh what a trial!
A manual for narratives, for strategies so sly,
Between 9/11 and now, it's all just pie in the sky.

The Oligarchy's power struggle, oh what a sight to see,
Marshaling their lieutenants, it's all just comedy.
A comment turned into a blog, on themes so grand,
Who rules the Oligarchy? It's all just so unplanned!

In the land of math and science, there's an elephant conundrum to solve,
How to fit it in a fridge, a problem that's hard to resolve.
Differentiate and integrate, redefine and apply theorems so bold,
But the elephant's still too big, its fate remains untold.

Number theory suggests factorizing and multiplying with glee,
But the elephant remains unscathed, it's as big as can be.
Algebra steps in with its solutions, trying to make it fit,
But the fridge remains shut, the elephant won't submit.

Topology takes a turn, suggesting some bizarre tricks,
Swallow the fridge, turn it inside out, it's a plan that quickly sticks.
Make a Klein bottle fridge, or declare the elephant's smaller form,
But no matter the approach, the fridge still fails to conform.

Algebraic topology replaces the fridge interior with R^3,
But the elephant still stands tall, as big as big can be.
Linear algebra tries to fit its basis, but it's just a futile try,

The elephant won't shrink, no matter how hard we apply.

Affine geometry attempts a transformation, but it's all in vain,
The elephant won't budge, its size will remain.
Set theory claims it's easy, but the challenge still stands,
The elephant and fridge won't cooperate, it's not what the theory demands.

Geometry declares an axiom, but it's just wishful thinking,
The elephant defies all laws, it's not about shrinking.
Complex analysis puts the fridge at the origin, but it's all in vain,
The elephant's outside the circle, and the problem remains.

Numerical analysis tries to fit just its trunk, but it's not enough,
The error term grows large, the challenge remains tough.
Statistics brings in bright and dull minds, but neither can prevail,
The elephant won't fit, no matter how hard we wail.

And amidst all these mathematical escapades, there's a tale so grand,
Of an Italian politician and his secret so unplanned.
He told his friend of his mother's high notions, so pure and bright,
And of his own secret profession that he kept out of sight.

For his mother thought he played the piano in a brothel, you see,
A far more respectable job than a minister could ever be.
And in the world of music and dance, there's a story so bold,

Of the Dirty Dozen and their language so untold.

The Chicago houses echoed with their tunes so raw,
A language so colorful, breaking every decorum law.
And then there's Honky Tonk Blues, a tale of naked dances so true,
Where art and stripping intertwined in a New Orleans view.

So amidst the math and music, the elephant still stands tall,
Defying all attempts to fit it in a fridge so small.
But in this world of absurdity and laughter so grand,
The elephant's refusal to shrink is just par for the funny land.

In a land not so far away, in a time not so long ago,
A tale of intrigue and deception, a comedy to bestow.
A story of emails exchanged, with secrets to reveal,
And a poet to narrate the tale, with wit and much appeal.

The plot thickens with warnings, of nefarious controllers in power,
An email exchange of planted stories, a warning to make them cower.
A 'nere-do-gooder' on the pyramid, a senior figure in the game,
Protected by the powers that be, with scandal and dirt to claim.

Skripal's status is shrouded in mystery, conspicuous by its absence,
A story of involuntary detention, or perhaps a case of nonsense.
The warning across the Bows of Brexit MPs, a tale of Brexit's line,

The tap turned on and off at will, with power struggles that intertwine.

The Daily Mail reveals a pervert's son, a former Black Rod's kin, Quizzed by police investigating, a tale of child sex abuse to spin.
Amidst the chaos and intrigue, the plot thickens with each turn,
A comedy of errors and deceit, with lessons we must learn.

The Bezmenov pamphlet is a manual, for narratives of the past,
A power struggle within the Oligarchy, with schemes that forever last.
Marshaling their lieutenants, with means both fair and foul,
A showdown for the ages, a comedy to make us howl.

But fear not, dear reader, for in this tale of deceit and woe,
There's humor to be found, with laughter that will flow.
For in the midst of all the chaos, the absurdity takes flight,
A comedy of errors and escapades, to bring us joy and light.

And so we come to the end of this rhyming hexameter,
A tale of false narratives, a narrative so clever.
Hollywood and the media, the new Apocrypha they say,
It's all just a comedy, in an economical escapade!

9

Chapter 9

The Sky is Falling In

As Roger poured himself a drink and pondered over the latest developments in his chaotic life, a strange calling echoed in the back of his mind. It was as if the universe was conspiring to send him on a wild adventure of truth and peace. But let's be real, Roger wasn't exactly the poster child for truth and peace. He was more like a walking disaster with a penchant for getting himself into the stickiest of situations.

You see, Roger was knee-deep in a world of espionage, political shenanigans, and dodgy deals. His old buddy Bunto was no better, spinning artifices at the UN and narrowly missing out on the Premiership. And don't even get me started on the MI 6 Control File that haunted Roger's dreams like a bad rerun of a spy movie gone wrong.

But amidst all the chaos and questionable life choices, Roger found himself contemplating the meaning of it all. Was he making a mistake? Should he cut his losses and run for the hills? Or should he embrace the madness and see where it takes him?

As he gazed up at the stars, contemplating his next move, he couldn't help but chuckle at the absurdity of it all. Here he was, a man with more skeletons in his closet than a haunted house, pondering the mysteries of the universe. It was like a bad sitcom script, but hey, at least it made for an entertaining inner monologue.

And then it hit him – the wisdom of his dear old Mam. "Plenty more fish in the sea," she used to say. Maybe she was onto something. Maybe it was time for Roger to cast his net in a different direction and see what other aquatic creatures he could reel in.

But as he mulled over his options, he realized that this decision wasn't just about him. It was about setting an example for his children, about showing them that life could be lived with understanding and empathy, not just cynicism and deceit.

So, with a newfound sense of purpose, Roger made a decision. He wasn't going to let the powers that be dictate his fate. He was going to take control and chart his own course, even if it meant ruffling a few feathers along the way.

As he looked up at the stars once more, a sense of clarity washed over him. The universe may be vast and unpredictable, but Roger was ready to embrace the chaos and carve out his own path. And who knows, maybe along the way, he'd stumble upon some unexpected treasures – both figurative and literal.

So there you have it, folks. Roger may be a walking disaster, but he's also a man on a mission – a mission to find truth, peace, and maybe even a few fish in the sea. And if that's not the makings of a great adventure, then I don't know what is.

And with that, let's raise a glass to Roger and his quest for redemption, or at the very least, a good laugh along the way. Cheers to chaos, may it lead us to unexpected places and plenty more fish in the sea!

10

Chapter 10

Ground Control to Major Tom.

The sashaying roundness of the most divine backside ever draped in sheer Galianno little black dressedness, waved its departure as Roger glanced up with a white powder dusted on the 3 am shadow on his top lip. He poured himself a slug of Glenmorangie from the open bottle amongst the debris upon the marble-topped table in the lounge of his suite in the Four Seasons Canary Wharf, London.

A regular haunt and a venue for all of his worst habits, an eerie from where retreating from a world spiraling out of control he could pretend he was free.

Earlier that day he had received a phone call from his lobbyist in Whitehall, MI 6, and The CIA had reports from the white helmets that the Aleppo dough had been identified and the present threat to the final capture of Syria and destruction of Assad, would soon be secured. The consortium which Roger managed and was a majority shareholder in would then be able to progress with developing their interests in the Golan Heights and Roger a property developer would be able to implement the Marina Development at Tartus, the Russian naval yard.

A strange calling echoed in the back of his conscious,

Faintly, brother..... return..... Forbears Truth, What the fuck?

Bunto Thompson his old Burlington buddy had been busy spinning artifices at the UN earlier, having risen to Foreign Secretary and narrowly missing out on the Premiership. It had been Bunto who had cleared the way for Rog' to get the Marina Contract in Tripoli Libya, it had been a shame that the Crimea deal had fallen through. Their fathers had also greatly profited back in the day with the Marina Deal in Split. Bunto didn't ever seem to give a second thought to his own peccadilloes, perhaps it was all that practice with the Whips office. But Rog never a politician was never happy with the MI 6 Control File and often woke in a cold sweat with that recurring nightmare of that strange little guy in the gabardine coat pushing the Manila envelope across the table at the Travelers club in St James. He had lost his first marriage anyway, even without his Wife, an international Lawyer, having seen the incriminating pictures.

Buntos he Knew was far far worse as were Crambournes and Gideons their fellow partners in High Jinx and even deeper corruption. With their strange Skull and Bones fetishes. Rog', had never accepted their invitations to Bohemian Grove and His Bilderberg Meeting invite had been withdrawn after one particularly unfortunate incident where he had projectile vomited into the newly coiffed hair of The Mistress of Some Guy. Bunto had said this chap was high up with that lot. Rog, had fancied a go with the mistress and never quite worked out why Flowers and apologies were not enough to woo her into the sack, surely they would make up for ruining her hair do.

Rog wasn't interested he often told his old Burlington Buddies those guys are a bunch of "Wankerers" as Bunto, had Dubbed the President of Turkey.

But that strange calling again? , what was that, it sounded like.?

" Brothers I will return to retrace our forbears journey of truth and peace".

Rog' went across to the huge glass plate windows of his suite pulled back the sliding door and strolled out onto the Terrace. He leaned on the Barrier.

Looking up at the stars he looked up.

That calling again in the back of his mind.

Brothers I will return to retrace our forbears journey of truth and peace.

Roger asked himself out loud, Am I making a mistake?

Looking up at the stars, disappointed wondering if it was indeed a mistake, he knew he had made many and this was perhaps going to be his biggest mistake, one he may not be able to recover from.

At once he imagined looking down across the hills at the city lights below, another time, another place. Somewhere in all of those city lights was the one, where would he find the one, where would happiness lie?

From East to West, from the poor parts of Town to the fun palaces of the West End, or the workplaces with the sensible secretaries, all tied back hair and sensible heels, barely concealing a taste for adventure and something more. To the suburbs, the boring suburbs which existed only to feed the machine of consumerism. Or, maybe out there in the countryside beyond the neon and strip lights glow, beyond the artificial illumination, in the darkness The unknown, maybe there?

Back to the present sky, Rog' looked up, the cool breeze approaching dawn the darkest hour, clear infinite distances above. Light years away astronomical arc distances the hopelessness of it all dawned.

How could it be? What are the chances of choosing the right world? Who could know which sun would warm the shores of the desert island he had become? The selection of where to aim the rocket ship. Which galaxy, which region, which planet, which hemisphere? What are the chances of making the right choices? At what point do you call back to mission control?

"All systems read negative, request change course. Ground controlled To Major Tom shut down systems."

And there he was looking at the Blue world, suspended in the eternal contradiction, cut your losses or carry on?

"Plenty more Fish in the sea" Mam, always used to say.

Is it Chicken Lickin at this point which story occurs, that old story we all knew as kids? The Sky is Falling In.

maybe the Emperor's New Clothes?

, perhaps that one about crying wolf?

For all the spaceships, quantum mechanics, and logic. The semantics and semiotics, the algebra, calculus and theoretical physics the maths and the scientific method. When all the rationalisation is performed and when all is said and done he thought.

Mam, she had expressed it best, so much more clearly.

"Plenty more fish in the sea"

The infinity sign he thought, looks a bit like a fish a push you pull me fish. Dr. Do-Little, why was it the Dr. Do Little reminded him of Pygmalion, My Fair Lady——? Ah, Ralph Richardson. A signifier connecting two totally unconnected stories from two different worlds.

So why not cut the losses? Leave the table, quit while you're ahead.

Leave the table like he used to so often at the casino in Cannes.

Walk away with your winnings quit whilst you're ahead."

Set your upper and lower bounds, and limit your potential losses, after all, no one ever went broke making a profit. They can't hurt you if you don't care.

Well, that was just it, he loved his children and didn't want to screw up their world.

This was not about him, he thought.

Not about him, not about ego not about anything other than loving and caring that they, his children, could be in the world with understanding and empathy and not the cynicism that had come to grip his own life.

That cynicism was born of want, inherited from his Dad.

"Expensive presents are always better, even if we forgot your actual Birthday"

"Always buy your round"

"What's the strongest bridge in the world"? That one oh please not that one. Another Pub story fueled by more alcohol and false bonhomie. No!

None of that, His kids would be allowed to find out who they were, and how much of life can really be lived without pretending. How could he escape and not leave a scar that would never heal? How could he get out without depriving his Children of, albeit a flawed father?

How could he leave without creating a scar that would never heal?

Yes, Osho, Ego the false center, he had been aiming at the wrong galaxy, at least this time he knew his own center, and at least this time he could do the right thing. This would be about his own self, not his Ego, he realised he must take control, Whoa, when did that happen?

That voice again.

"Brothers I will return to retrace our forbears journey of truth and peace".

He observed his ego, just like Osho had said it would fall away. There it lay on the ground, as a snake sheds its skin there it was the husk of the snake he had been moments before.

"" Just Look at you, a shell of a man"" That's what he had projected for others to see all along, that's what his father had created, and that's all that "they" had been interested in. "What will the neighbors think?"Your cousins went to Uni' ", Keeping up with the Jones's.

Breaking the chain, he saw now.

Fucking hell, he said out loud.
No wonder it was never advisable to return to the Cave. Plato knew something of how powerful his big fat golden lie, noble lie, whatever the fuck it was, Noble lie yeah that was it.

Remember Rog', he thought, Pillars of salt and all that, don't look back.

Doubt, always doubt, too late already.

Back to Space, Space warp drive, set your controls for the center of the sun, we're going in.

What's that low on the horizon, ah the red planet, mars. 3 am in the east low on the horizon Mars's red tint flickering and another distant memory.

Carmel California on tour with Godfrey. It was that Trip where Roger had taken his first look through a real telescope up In Big Sur, The post house ranch. Different times and a different person, lessons learned then. The world actually Turns on its axis.

Other lesson's, that some people put wealth before friendship.

There but for the grace of privileged go I thought Rog', Not anymore I fucking will not.

They can take their Control File and shove it up Bunto's Arse, he might quite enjoy that.

11

Chapter 11

Incitatus riddles the Forum

Ah, the flabby wineskin of the brain, yielding to some pathologic strain, voiding driblets of aphorisms. Ambrose Bierce would have a field day with this one.

In closing, philosophy is indeed a love of truth, but let's contrast that with Caligula's aphorism, shall we? "Once you clear the bodies," said Boris Johnson, the British Foreign Secretary. Oh, what a vision! A shopping center and a low-tax Costa Blanco, all you need to do is clear the dead bodies away. Simple, right?

But let's not dwell on the morbid. "Bring on the low-tax Costa Blanco, BoJo's on it! Chin up, sambo! A brand new Nando's awaits once you clear the bodies. Swap that spear for Lucre, get some air-con, and voila! Apple, Gucci, Rayban, Uber - all yours once you clear the bodies". Now that Luke Wright the poet knows a thing or two about the people who run the country, Jolly Good Chap.

Oh, the horrors of war, but fear not." It's British Airways and Thomas Cook to the rescue once you clear the bodies. So grab a broom and get sweeping. Ol' Blighty's expertise is here to help. No, we don't speak Bongo-ese, just clear the bloody bodies".

"The friendly guns have done their bit, shock doctrine strikes, and now dig that pit. We'll build a massive mall right here, and you can work in it once you clear the bodies".

Very Catchy, Bunto was kind of proud to be memorialized in a poem, after all he had done the same for the President of Turkey, he drawled "Wankerer, yep I still got dem tunes baby."

Now onto Incitatus visiting the Forum with due 'Ungar' (SIC). How does one even begin to fathom where the rhetoric starts and sophistry takes over? It's like watching a live performance of political karaoke, with all the neo-liberal standards being belted out with fervor.

The UN Security Council session was cringe-worthy, to say the least. Kerry and Johnson stole the biscuit in a performance that would have made even Lucian blush. It's peak mendacity, at least for 2016.

And then there's Boris Johnson, trotting well in the paddock with his Britannic colors. Impeccable breeding and representing the Britannic Vassal State owned by Washington (Consensus). Refused at its last outing or rather did not run due to industrial stoppages back at the stables of Westminster.

With the establishment's taste for Islamophobia, calls for the death penalty for terrorist offenses might be floated. A populist vote-winning strategy, perhaps? The thought is gut-wrenchingly appalling, but seeing Boris Johnson at the UN Security Council, it's probably a referendum he might quite relish.

And let's not forget Kerry's poetic rhetorical cloud and his enchanted equine mastication of UNGA. Bono narrates a video of the Syrian refugee Olympic team - it's all too much to handle.

The Aleppo Convoy - a genuine mistake or something more sinister? The facts tend to emerge after a thorough investigation, and rigorous checking requires time. So let's not jump to conclusions just yet.

Ah, the evidence? It's a stubborn thing indeed. As stubborn as a compliant consul or a horse-like Equus ferus caballus. Where are the Lucian's in the fourth estate and their dead tree rags of apology, privilege, and patronage when we need them?

So let's review the bidding. Everyone is entitled to their own opinion, but not their own facts. And as President John Adams once said, facts are stubborn things.

Indeed they are. And as the little boy declared in the old fairy tale, where are the emperor's clothes? He is surely not clothed in truth woven from threads of facts and tended with wisdom and care.

And there you have it - a witty take on political rhetoric and diplomatic theatrics. The stage is set, the players are in position, and the show must go on.

12

Chapter 12

A Sketch from the UN General Assembly.

> In the words of Daniel Patrick Moynihan, "everyone is entitled to their own opinion, but you are not entitled to your own facts." The little boy in the old fairy tale would surely ask: where are the emperor's clothes? It seems that truth is indeed a rare commodity in today's political theater.

I had the distinct and dubious pleasure of attending the UN Security Council session where the esteemed John Kerry and the Fat Blair Whig, Bojo (Bunto) Thompson de Spivel, both put on a display of rhetoric, sophistry, and mendacity that left both exuding a smug and cringing inanition of self-awareness. The Latin Scholar and the Congressman 'Ungar' (SIC) graced the stage, and I must say, it was a performance that even Lucian, the great Roman satirist, would have blushed at.

The entire spectacle was cringe-worthy, with each participant vying for the title of Peak Mendacity of 2016. It was like watching a political karaoke session, with each of the "Statesmen" belting out the same old neo-liberal standards as if they were their own. The entire affair seemed like a public broadcast of truth stretched beyond belief, leaving me unsure whether the intention was to convince themselves of their own lies or to persuade the audience that what they were saying was the truth.

As I watched Kerry and Johnson prance about with their polished Latin and Greek rhetorical flourishes, I couldn't help but wonder if they were trying to impress the dignitaries or simply salvage sound bites for the talking heads. Their unconvincing performances left me pondering the true purpose of their theatrics.

The performance of Kerry and Johnson was so unconvincing that correspondents were forced to use their quotes to provide context to Mr. Kerry´s 'Stubborn Facts'. It was as if the real efforts to address the mess that is Syria were relegated to the cutting room floor, while the theatrics took center stage. Even the Turks and Ukrainians made special appearances, leaving me to question their motives.

Syria's tragedy is a failed color revolution provoked by the USA and its regional stooges, and a ragtag bag of ne'er-do-wells in the best traditions of regime changes. Kerry himself admitted that "This is serious Business," which seemed like a call for accomplices from other stings to help in the present setup of the scam. It was a performance worthy of Caligula's favorite trusty stead, Incitatus, out of Straw by Blair.

Boris Johnson, in all his Britannic glory, trotted well in the paddock, representing the Britannic Vassal State owned by Washington. His performance left much to be desired, and I couldn't help but wonder if he was relishing the opportunity to entertain the emperor's will. His vague references to outrages and rhetorical flourishes left me scratching my head, especially when he mused about " UNGA " this and "UNGER" that, I was confused until realizing it was an acronym.

Kerry, on the other hand, outshone everyone with his flowery rhetorical sophistry. His dramatic pauses and references to "Bono narrated" videos left me in disbelief. The entire affair was so appalling that it seemed designed to elevate the 'Evidence' to come, leaving no room for anyone to have their own facts.

The evidence presented, particularly regarding the Aleppo Convoy, left much to be desired. It is far too early to draw any conclusions, and the present hiatus and intrigue only suggest skull duggery. The stubborn things called facts tend to emerge after a thorough investigation, which requires time and scientific rigor.

Boris almost had me convinced at the start, but his curious set of facts quickly revealed his true intentions. His blame of the Assad regime and his selective interpretation of events left me unhooked. It was like witnessing a political performance worthy of a late-night temple gathering.

As I reflect on this surreal experience at the UN Security Council, I can't help but wonder where the Lucian's in the fourth estate are hiding. The entire affair felt like a grand theatrical performance, with everyone vying for attention and applause.

In conclusion, I must say that the entire spectacle left me both amused and bewildered. The stubborn things called facts are indeed elusive, and it takes time and rigorous investigation to uncover them. As I bid adieu to the marbled atria of the United Nations, I can't help but envision Boris once again bent over, braced, and ready to expose his thinking parts. It was a performance worthy of a late-night Bullingdon bash, complete with gimp masks and feasting on porcine fare.

In the words of Daniel Patrick Moynihan, "everyone is entitled to their own opinion, but you are not entitled to your own facts." The little boy in the old fairy tale would surely ask: where are the emperor's clothes? It seems that truth is indeed a rare commodity in today's political theater.

I must say that watching the UN Security Council session was a surreal experience that left me both entertained and exasperated. The entire affair felt like a grand theatrical performance, which made all but the particularly naive or stupid less than convinced that Freedom and Democracy were the Goals of the "Syria Show" on which Bunto had fixed his best Churchillian poseur designs. As I bid adieu to the marbled atria of the United Nations, I can't help but envision Boris once again bent over, braced, and ready to expose his thinking parts. It was a performance worthy of a late-night temple gathering, complete with gimp masks and feasting on porcine fare.

13

Chapter 13

Translators False Horses of the enlightenment

Ah, the Patron St of Translators, St Jerome, dishing out advice in Latin like it's going out of style. I mean, who doesn't love a good Latin quote to start the day, right? But seriously, the guy had a point - it's all about the sense of the sense, not just the words. You've got to get into the nitty-gritty of the cultural and social context behind the text. It's like translating isn't just about swapping words from one language to another, it's about capturing the essence, the vibe, the whole shebang.

And then we've got Zenophobia - the irrational fear of convergent sequences. I mean, who comes up with this stuff? Convergent sequences? Sounds like a support group for numbers who are tired of going their separate ways and just want to come together for a change.

Now, let's talk about Abdul and Elijah. These two dudes are like a blast from the past, with their roots stretching back 11,000 years. They're like the Og farmers, cultivating crops and herding animals before it was cool. And don't even get me started on their shared context - it's like they're bonded by more than just their faiths, they're bonded by their love for the land and all that jazz.

From the Fertile mountain plains to the Cuneiform Tablets, these guys are on a journey through history, uncovering the secrets of their ancestors and shouting into valleys like they're in some epic movie. I can almost hear Abdul yelling, "Brothers, I will return to retrace our forbears' journey of truth and peace!" I mean, talk about dramatic flair.

But hey, let's not forget about the real heroes here - those water wheels churning out nourishment like it's nobody's business. I can just picture Abdul and Elijah standing there, staring at those bad boys and contemplating the meaning of life. Or maybe they're just wondering if they can hitch a ride on one of those things and make a grand entrance into the next town.

All in all, this tale of ancient grains and historical shenanigans is like a wild ride through time and space. It's got drama, it's got culture, it's got water wheels - what more could you ask for? So here's to Abdul and Elijah, the Og farmers on a quest for truth and peace. Who knew history could be this entertaining?

14

Chapter 14

Zenophobia: the irrational fear of convergent sequences.

The Patron St of Translators, St Jerome advised, 'Non-Verbum e verbo, sed sensum exprimere de sens' (The sense of the sense), with Latin, Irony? In which he meant, take from a text in one language the context of the writing in how culturally and socially it would have been meant and heard by the Writer and intended reader.

This advice was quite possibly borrowed by Jerome form

Cicero in De Oratore ("On the Orator"), when he said that in translating from Greek to Latin "I did not think I ought to count them out to the reader like coins, but to pay them by weight, as it were."[2]

On these Fertile mountain plains fed by the springs and water wheels. The Descendants of Abdul's forebears would have spread out from their Abu Hureyra, original settlement. Where for 400 years ahead of the Cultivation of Crops they became based for their Hunter-Gatherer society. Drought and Climate changes in the middle Euphrates. Forced the hunter-gatherers to start cultivating. These early agricultural enterprises are found by the evidence of fat cultivated Seeds Which are carbon radio dated to A 1000 year dry spell known as the Younger Dryas, a period of cooling interrupting the gradual Warming which had begun already at the end of the last Ice age this was 11,000 to 10,000 BC. Much of Northern Europe was still beneath retreating Glaciers. The Cereals from this era led to the development of the secrets of Agriculture and Metallurgy and invented the very first alphabet. Religions, Philosophies, the language of trade, systems of urban development, of diplomatic and cultural exchange; all germinated in geographical Syria. And Lead to the Development of the Dough which Abdul´s Family had been custodians of since time immemorial. Out of those first sedentary Farming communities arose the Units of measurement and Value which remain familiar although not understood in context, in the commerce of the 21st century. Between 3000 and 2000 BC, we find the first written records of what Society had evolved to From that distant Steppe, now submerged beneath Lake Assad and In the form of Cuneiform Tablets we have the code of Al Hurrambi and the tablets of Ebla and Mari Abdulla and Elijah had a common sense of meaning; they sensed in each other the bonds that the two had formed as boys. Also, they had inherited from generations before, a bond to each other, through the land. Theirs was a shared context, with their conventional traditions and memories predating even the Faiths they both now nominally carried and which were designed to bind them to separate groups, their bonds predated these religious categories, by 11,000 years. They Could never negate each other by such crude categorisation.

The Area from which they were hewn, was characterised by a rich mixture of Farming opportunity from the Cereals to the Buffalo, goats and the Dates. The surrounding areas had produced an abundance which in turn led to the foundation and growth of the great Ancient City of Aleppo, from where the two had just fled. There had been partings and disruptions before. Until the Written Cuneiform records were rediscovered in the latter part of the 19th Century and through to the present day, an oral tradition had carried the memories of their ancestors, the first farmers, even to the present day in Folk Songs, Poems, and Dance and Artistic artifacts and body decoration. Each, preserving the legends of previous wars, invasions, injustices, and Accounting for, and righting, wrongs. Where they would stay for the night, Looking across the valley towards the sea across valleys towards Beirut across Lebanon. These place names and peoples, whose histories stemmed back to the period of the founding of Ebla and Mari, between 3000 BC and 2000 BC, and their subsumption into the Akkadian empire from Mesopotamia.

The Akkadians were the source of the Semitic Languages which both spoke and Out of which grew those languages of the Phoenicians, Aramaic, Hebrew, and Arabic. When they looked down into the valley to Lebanon leading down into Israel, they knew there were seven Species now known as the Seven Species of the Land of Israel (Shivat'at HaMinim) The Two Grains and Five Fruits, Wheat, Barley, Grape, Fig, Pomegranates, Olive and Date. Across the Landscapes where they now traveled it had become written in the Landscape and the concentrations of population, what the land would support regarding Population and the degree of sophistication and of Luxury which had resulted in the lives of the people there. Along the rivers lay Fertile stretches, on The Tigris and its tributaries and along the Euphrates. There, where river banks formed. Agriculture by Irrigation generated bountiful harvests, between Parallel Chains of Hills Flatlands and Narrow Valleys, and higher ranges from the Piedmont Plains along the Tigris to the Alpine Tops of the Zagros Mountains, Sufficient rainfall assured Annual Cereal Crops and also produced an abundance of fruit trees. In the plains between those two great rivers by the grace of weather and Nature's whim again there are areas where Cereal Crops of varying yields are nurtured by farmers to produce crops of varying degrees. Large Tracts of Land between sewn fields and the barren desserts Offer Grazing Grounds for flocks of sheep and goats even for some cattle. Date Palm Plantations and horticulture utilising the Inundations similar to those famous on the Nile are also harnessed. Gardens for Vegetables and summer crops sustained by man-made irrigation Such as the water wheels Our Two Fugitives could hear stoically turning their watery Nourishment which mixed with sun and soil as generations for millennia before had turned into food and wealth.

Around Areas of bounded kinship and cultural traditions formed natural and human topographies of localised and regionalised, polities. Societies. Civilisations and Cultures, emerging from the potentials of the Combinations of Natures Gifts, harnessed by humankind. What the soils, rains, sunshine, Winds, and industry of farmers could coax from the land determined the development of Livelihoods and community focal points from where structures of Family, community, society, Hierarchy, and Faith developed. This is the Grain of truth, From where Abdul and Elijah came, what made them, and from which all are made. All wealth flowed from these agricultural Species, those five. All this stemmed from Abdul and Elijah's Ancestors in Abu-Hureyra 11,000 years ago.

Abdul shouted into the Valley, Brothers I will return to retrace our forbears journey of truth and peace.

15

Chapter 15

Wheat and the Chess Board.

Ah, the delightful world of bread jokes and mathematical anecdotes! It's like a collision of flour and numbers, resulting in a comedic explosion. Let's dive into the world of wheat, chessboards, and population doubling with a sprinkle of humor.

First off, let's address the bread jokes. Who knew that loaves of bread could have such a beef with grapes? But hey, if a loaf of bread wants to validate its anger, it's got to raisin the stakes, right? And then there's the mix of Raggedy Ann and the Pillsbury Doughboy, resulting in a redhead with a yeast infection. Talk about an unexpected combination!

Now, onto the wheat and chessboard problem. Imagine the inventor of chess asking for wheat according to the wheat and chessboard problem, only to realize that the unexpectedly huge number of wheat grains would outstrip the ruler's resources. It's like a mathematical plot twist! And let's not forget the "second half of the chessboard" concept, where an exponentially growing factor begins to have a significant economic impact. That's like the point in a story where everything goes haywire in the most entertaining way possible.

And who can resist a good anecdote about Henri Poincaré suspecting his local bakery of selling lighter loaves of bread? The man weighed loaves for a year, plotted distributions, and even brought evidence to the bread police. Now that's some serious dedication to the pursuit of justice in the world of baked goods!

Oh, and the physicist, engineer, and statistician out hunting? Classic! The physicist calculates, the engineer factors in air resistance, and the statistician... well, let's just say they have a unique way of celebrating a successful hunt.

But wait, it doesn't stop there. We're diving into population doubling and ancestral trees. Bill Bryson takes us on a journey through generations and population milestones, revealing that we're all one big family tree. It's like a genealogical rollercoaster with a side of mathematical intrigue.

In conclusion, whether it's bread jokes, chessboard problems, or ancestral trees, there's always room for a dash of wit and humor. After all, who said math and history couldn't be entertaining? It's all about finding the comedy in the unexpected and the laughter in the numbers.

16

Chapter 16

Greta Says it's all to do with Climate. Yep the climate of BS.

Oh, my dear friends and fellow Earthlings, let me regale you with a tale of epic proportions - a rollercoaster ride through the annals of nature, climate change, and political shenanigans. Buckle up, for we are about to embark on a journey filled with whimsy, wonder, and a healthy dose of skepticism.

Chapter 17 will end with a delightful quote from Vaclav Smil, reminding us of the power of persistence. I can see the Future as well as CO2 you see.

" Like a drop of water hollowing a stone, the forces of nature and human folly collide in a slow, relentless effort. It's like trying to get out of bed on a Monday morning - a struggle of epic proportions" And as Eric Cantona said the Seagulls follow the trawler..

Shakespeare makes an appearance, waxing poetic about the magical powers of gold. Apparently, it can make black white and foul fair. Alas, I must have missed that alchemy class in school. Perhaps I was too busy trying to turn my lunch into gold. Oh no wait I was on Climate Strike.

As we ponder the ebb and flow of harvests, it's like playing a game of agricultural roulette. Will the crops thrive or disappoint? It's like playing FarmVille, but with real dirt and sweat. Who knew farming could be so dramatic?

The anthropologists chime in, reminding us that human environments and civilization are a product of sedentary societies. It's like we're all just chilling on this big rock hurtling through space, trying not to mess things up too much. I mean, who gave us the keys to the planet anyway?

But oh, the disconnect between assumptions and feedback from the soil! It's like trying to have a conversation with a stubborn mule. Information is emitting in both directions, but the hearing receivers at either end of the line have been turned off. Typical. It's like a cosmic game of telephone gone wrong.

And then we delve into the dangerous territory of climate change. Is it man-made? It's Man Made up alright, no wait, oh yes it's because Polar Bears and Glaciers and stuff. Is it nature's way of giving us a cosmic side-eye? Who knows! It's like trying to solve a Rubik's Cube while blindfolded. Except this time, the stakes are much higher than bragging rights at a party.

Thought criminals who take a bold stance against "Climate

Belief," questioning the CO2 hypothesis and poking fun at the whole shebang. should be roasted Joan of Arc style, That will make them laugh on the other side of their skeptical faces. Who knew climate change could be so entertaining? How Dare you, entertaining, all-consuming I want to scream!!!!

We then take a delightful detour into the world of ad hominem arguments and political shenanigans. It's like watching a reality TV show, but with more suits and less drama (or maybe more, who knows?). Politics - the ultimate reality TV show.

Ah, Al Gore and his "Inconvenient Truth." It's like a movie that got mixed reviews - some loved it, some thought it was about as accurate as a horoscope. But hey, at least it got people talking about climate change, right?

And then there's Mr. Trump, our very own modern-day Narcissus. Will he heed the echoing masses or just keep gazing at his reflection in the Twitterverse? It's like watching a Shakespearean tragedy unfold in real time. To tweet or not to tweet, that is the question.

But fear not, dear reader, for amidst the chaos and confusion, there's a glimmer of hope. Jeremy Corbyn steps onto the stage, ready to debate and discuss. It's like a breath of fresh air in a room full of hot air. A beacon of hope in the stormy sea of politics.

And as we reach the end of our journey, we're left with a sense of whimsy and wonder. It's like stepping out of a carnival funhouse, slightly disoriented but thoroughly entertained. Who knew that learning about nature and climate change could be this much fun?

So there you have it, my dear friends - Chapter 17, a delightful romp through the annals of nature and human folly. Who knew that a drop of water could lead us on such a wild adventure? And remember, amidst the chaos and confusion, there's always room for whimsy and wonder. So let's embrace the madness and keep on laughing through it all! And don't forget as well as being to see the future what I just proved, I can also see CO2 its not colorless and odorless to me oh no I can sense it, see it as if I breathe it out every time I breathe in.

17

Chapter 17

A corbinistas refrain

As I sit down to reflect on the past 126 months, I can't help but feel like a refugee from an unjustified invasion of Syria. No, I haven't been displaced by a military conflict, but rather by the relentless bombardment of information and beliefs that seem to have invaded our collective consciousness. It's like being caught in a storm of opinions and ideologies, with no shelter in sight.

The words of William Shakespeare come to mind, "Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate." It's as if we are constantly being fed a buffet of information, some of it golden and glittering, but often leaving a foul taste in our mouths. The gods must be chuckling at our confusion, wondering why we're so easily swayed by the allure of shiny ideas that promise to make black white and foul fair.

In this age of information overload, it's easy to get swept up in the currents of belief and ideology. We're bombarded with messages about climate change, political upheavals, and societal divisions. It's like trying to navigate a labyrinth of conflicting narratives, each vying for our attention and allegiance.

But amidst this cacophony of voices, I find solace in the wisdom of our ancestors. They too faced their own challenges and uncertainties, yet they found ways to navigate the ever-changing landscape of human civilization. They sowed their seeds, weathered disappointments, and celebrated their bountiful harvests. They understood the ebb and flow of life, the cycles of nature that shape our existence.

As I ponder the state of our modern world, I can't help but think about the disconnect between our assumptions and the feedback we receive from the world around us. We've become so enamored with our own narratives that we've stopped listening to the whispers of nature, the subtle cues that guide us towards a more harmonious existence.

Take climate change, for example. The debate rages on about the role of human activity in shaping our planet's future. But amidst the noise, I find myself questioning the dogma that insists on human-induced climate change as the primary driver of global warming. Call me a heretic, but I remain unconvinced by the prevailing narrative. I find myself drawn to the idea that we should focus on our environment, on measurable outcomes and real scientific possibilities.

In our quest for truth, we must also be wary of falling into the trap of idolatry. Whether it's the worship of false gods or the blind faith in man-made ideologies, we must remain vigilant against the allure of pride and narcissism. We are but a small part of the infinite whole, and it is hubris to place ourselves at the center of existence.

As we grapple with these weighty issues, it's important to remember that belief and faith are not one and the same. We must be cautious about becoming indebted to custodians of beliefs that may lead us astray. The path to enlightenment is fraught with pitfalls, and we must tread carefully to avoid falling into the traps of false idols and convoluted dogmas.

In the realm of politics, we see the same patterns play out. From Al Gore's "An Inconvenient Truth" to Ross Perot's warnings about NAFTA, we are reminded that even the most revered figures can be found wanting. The narrative of success and failure is often shaped by those in power, but it is up to us to question their claims and hold them accountable for their actions.

As we navigate this maze of beliefs and ideologies, let us remember that ad hominem attacks and exclusionary tactics have no place in civil discourse. We owe it to ourselves to seek out the truth, to challenge prevailing narratives, and to hold those in power accountable for their actions.

In closing, let us heed the words of Jeremy Corbyn: "The public anger that has propelled Donald Trump to office has been reflected in political upheavals across the world." It's a reminder that we must listen to the voices of dissent, engage in robust discussions, and stand ready to debate upon the issues that shape our world.

> So let's raise a toast to skepticism, to questioning authority, and to embracing the complexity of our ever-changing world. After all, as the Romans knew, a drop of water hollows a stone not by force but by continually dripping. And in this deluge of information, it's up to us to be the steady drip that shapes the course of history. Cheers to that!

18

Chapter 18

Radishes and Dildos - A Historical Romp, The Classical Scholar Bufoon

Ah, the curious and comical world of historical artifacts and literary mishaps. Let's take a delightful dive into the eccentricities of the past, where radishes and dildos take center stage in a merry dance of wit and whimsy.

Dear Rog,

Oh, the things you find when rummaging through the annals of history! It seems that even the most esteemed figures of yore couldn't resist a good old-fashioned mix-up. Take Charles II and the Earl of Rochester, for instance. During the Christmas festivities at Court in 1673, a lampoon meant for the King ended up in his hands by mistake. What ensued was a merry escapade of mistaken identities and scandalous verses that would make even Shakespeare blush.

And what about the illustrious Godel and Descartes? It appears that they, too, found themselves entangled in a web of existential confusion. Godel couldn't quite prove he was here, while Descartes was left pondering whether he truly existed. Oh, the philosophical follies of yesteryear!

But let's not forget the true stars of this historical comedy - radishes and dildos. Yes, you read that right. From breadstick dildos to olisbokollikes, the ancient world was certainly not lacking in creativity when it came to intimate artifacts. It seems that even the Greeks and Romans had a penchant for mixing food and pleasure, with breadstick dildos and radish-related punishments making an appearance in their colorful tales.

And then there's the case of the anti-phallic dildo. A concept so delightfully absurd that one can't help but chuckle at the sheer ingenuity of it all. From nuns and boarding school misses to those fearful of pregnancy, it seems that the demand for unconventional pleasure knows no bounds.

But let's not stop there. The ribald humor of the past extends to literature as well. The Earl of Rochester's "Satyr on Charles II" is a prime example of bawdy verses that would have sent even the most liberal-minded courtiers into fits of scandalized laughter. And who could forget Aristophanes' rib-tickling comedies, where dildos and mischievous antics reigned supreme?

As we journey through these historical oddities, it becomes clear that humor has always been a timeless companion to humanity. Whether it's the antics of ancient philosophers or the misadventures of kings and courtiers, there's no denying the enduring appeal of a good old-fashioned comedy.

So, as we raise our metaphorical glasses to the quirks and quips of history, let's not forget to embrace the laughter that echoes through the corridors of time. After all, what better way to pay homage to the absurdities of yesteryear than with a hearty chuckle and a knowing wink?

And with that, dear readers, we bid adieu to this whimsical romp through the annals of history. Until next time, may your days be filled with laughter and your adventures be as delightfully absurd as those that came before.

Yours in historical hilarity,
Bunto.

19

Chapter 19

Going Direct Paradigm Spring of 2024! Deja Vu all over again, Talking bout a revolution.

Oh, wow, let's talk about the Going Direct Paradigm Spring of 2024! It's like, totally the most exciting thing to ever happen in the history of the universe. I mean, we're talking about a pivotal juncture in Civil Society, global business, and governance. It's like, so deeply rooted in historical events from the Mid 1970s, the Dot Com Bubble, the 2008 GFC, and the Covid-19 "Event 201" Going Direct "Flu De Tat". I mean, how could anyone not be bouncing off the walls with excitement over this stuff?

So, like, the internet and information intermediaries have totally transformed the dynamics of power and influence. It's like we're living in a real-life superhero movie, but instead of capes and masks, we've got historical context, philosophical perspectives, and technological advancements. I mean, who needs Batman when you've got diverse fields and multidisciplinary approaches, am I right?

And get this, we're developing strategies for ethical decision-making and sustainable business practices. It's like we're all part of a super-secret spy mission to save the world from unethical business practices. I can practically see the action-packed movie trailer now!

But wait, there's more! We're also embracing a holistic understanding of evolving geopolitical and economic dynamics. I mean, who needs roller coasters when you've got historical insights and philosophical frameworks to shape a sustainable and ethical future for global business and governance? It's like we're all on a wild ride through time and space, but instead of spaceships, we've got trust, belief, and motivation.

And then there's all this talk about "chartered rights" and "monopoly". It's like a real-life game of Monopoly, but instead of buying up properties, we're dealing with the rights of mankind and the sanctity of public faith. I can just imagine the board game now – "Monopoly: The Civil Society Edition".

But hey, let's not forget about the great tradition of starting at the beginning. I mean, who doesn't love a good closing statement? Evaluation of personal growth and intellectual exploration? That's like the most thrilling roller coaster ride through self-discovery anyone could ever ask for!

And then there's all this talk about "extremists trying to tear us apart" and a "shocking increase in extremist disruption". It's like a real-life action movie with political twists and turns. I can practically see the dramatic slow-motion shots and intense music playing in the background.

Oh, and don't even get me started on Liz Truss' revelation about the Bank of England Governor having more power than the Prime Minister. It's like a real-life political drama with unexpected plot twists. Who needs reality TV when you've got political intrigue?

And then there's all this talk about "our" democracy being as good as dead. It's like a suspenseful thriller with a touch of dystopian fiction. Who needs fiction novels when you've got real-life political commentary that reads like a page-turner?

> I mean, seriously, who needs Hollywood blockbusters when you've got the Going Direct Paradigm Spring of 2024? It's like a non-stop roller coaster ride through political intrigue, economic drama, and ethical decision-making. And hey, if nothing else, at least it makes for some seriously entertaining reading material!

So as you see the Dough is about the Bread and the Bread is a metaphor for Dough, and Prince Peter Kropotkin should have the last Word, Will it be Mutual Aid or the Conquest of Bread for the last words of The Conquest of Dough?

> "In our civilized societies, we are rich. Why then are the many poor? Why this painful drudgery for the masses? Why, even to the best-paid workman, this uncertainty for the morrow, in the midst of all the wealth inherited from the past, and in spite of the powerful means of production, which could ensure comfort to all, in return for a few hours of daily toil?"

— Kropotkin, Petre Alekseevich, kniaz, The Conquest of Bread

20

Chapter 20

Usury Hell's Fuel Mans Oppressor.

How Much honesty can there be in the world?

Usury, Hell's Fuel, man's oppressor.

Dear Reader,

We meet our Economy in its repose,
we see its citizens and see their polity.
One community under usury,
a life under the liberty of the yoke.

A country Estate.

Around a fireside after a day of work and sport,
a father and two sons talk and reflect.
A loved first Son speaks.
"Tell me this wise father how much money is there in the world? Tell me where it comes from and where it goes to die?"

"Son I can not answer your questions, for truly I do not believe that any man has the answers. Men have pursued money and in the pursuit lost sight of the prey, for it seems that one man's pursuit seems frustrated in the victory and another's object of pursuit, is only real during the chase?"

"Father I am your second son. I also wonder as my elder brother does, what is the meaning of money.
Should I lay suit for it and pay its high price, when we have all that we want and need here on your estates?"

"Dear second Son we have our life and family here and we have the extra hands and mouths that all help to feed ourselves and each other. In these treasures, we have no need of money. Others have been divorced from their estates and live in cities this is where we send our surpluses. "

" Our Neighbours also help to feed the cities the king asks us that we accept tokens from the citizens in return. Our tokens buy the favours of the king and pay the dues he calls taxes. In this we may as well act willingly, as in truth we have no choice."

The Bakers Kitchen Table.

Around a fireside, an artisan baker sits with his two daughters after a long day.

1st Daughter. "Tell me this wise Father. How much money is there in the world and how do customers who buy our Bread get their money? What of citizens without a token for a loaf ?"

Father Baker.
"The money we are paid is a token from the Government treasury with Authority from the king. These are the same tokens with which we buy our flour from the Estates and our firewood for the ovens."

2nd Daughter.
"Father this Bakery has been with the family for generations how would a new Oven and a new Shop be possible for the Orphaned Son of the bakery that burnt in the other village, destroying the family and the Shop? Somehow the Young boy survived, now he starts from nothing, how can he hope to provide his needs in the future?"

Father Baker.
"That poor boy will be alone with nothing in the world, a sad case, and a story told a thousand times. No one to teach his trade to him and no family business left to carry on, no plot of land from which to raise sustenance and a surplus to trade."

In the Soldiers House.

A soldier sits alone he is of high rank and of proud deportment he is served by his batman. Both bachelors and both veterans of many campaigns. The soldier has returned from the palace where he has received another decoration the Medal and the prize are being admired by the Batman.

Batman. ´´General, the king is very grateful for our campaign abroad this past year, a medal of solid gold encrusted with valuable jewels and many tokens in the prize. Enough to buy all the bread in all the bakeries in the kingdom."

General. " Yes the King is pleased his campaigns re furnish the treasury, to repay the usurers his international debts and interest."

In the Bankers House.

The Banker sits in luxury footmen in attendance and Wife and mother seated in equal pomp and finery. Business is being discussed...

Wife, "Tell me, dear, didn't the king look un-well at the ceremony this afternoon ?"

Mother. "He always was a nervous boy. When your Father and I used attend the Old Kings ceremonies, the Young prince as he was then, never seemed as right."

Wife. "Mother in Law when you and father-in-law knew the old king and we were not as rich as we are now. Now my husband has prospered as the new king's ambitions have overstretched his purse and I wondered if my Banker Husband had such concerns."

Banker. "My Father did much service to the old king, the new king does much service for us now in return".

Wife. "Tell me my banker husband where did your father and his father's father, find the wit to have the king grant you privilege to create the tokens, how many of them do you have where were they found?"

Banker. " It's a long story, let us take our leisure in the drawing room, that I might Smoke and have a brandy. My great Great Grandfather Sailed away to Xanadhu the year was 1249 and the Captain on board the ship was Marco Polo..."

"We lived in Venice when Marco Polo returned
He told of Kubla Khan's riches.
Khan's riches flowed from a strange Alchemy,
Money from Trees, Bark from Mulberry´s.
Denominated and sizes, under seal of the Khan.

Fein deafness to the khans bark on pain of death!

They serve as good as gold, a fraction of the weight.
All foreign merchants sell to khans monopoly,
the merchants trade with paper in the kingdom"

Such power as this with a twist of usury,
we innovate Marco Polo's discovery.
Creating the money but not the means to meet the usury
all wealth guaranteed to flow back to the issuer.

Money newly grown on trees, with usury sportingly absent.
Surely a creature whose Bark is not worse than its bite?
kings now borrowed for rivals to smite.
Bankers became emperors. Usury were the real fangs.´´

In the priest's House.

The priest sits at high table with the other clergy of the court.

Deacon, to the priest. " Holy Father the King seemed distracted today, the General seemed well rewarded from the latest campaign, how though do we reconcile the king's distraction with the claimed success?"

Parish Priest. "Yes holy father an orphaned child in my parish will be without hopes of starting afresh without usurious debt. How are the people to bear the costs, the bounties of their labours are ever increasing, and yet for want of money there is no traffic in the market square. Yet people are cold and hungry in the workhouses.

The Holy Father. "The King is seduced! my office is no longer to hear confessions and give guidance. But we are grew rich in the indulgences we must proffer on our monarch and his aide the banker."

"For usury makes a gain out of money itself.

Not used merely for exchange but increasing at interest.

A price paid for nothing exchanged for something.

The price of the receipt eats the value of the thing exchanged."

In the Courtroom. A usurer demands his deserts.

When shylock petitions the Duke can he exact a pound of flesh and spill no blood.

The Judge must honour the contract,

how many others does the forfeiture doom?

Neither brassy bosoms, rough hearts of flint nor stubborn Turks and tartars feel obliged to temper the harshness of usury or forfeiture, when the price can not be met.

The Quality of mercy is most definitely strained.

It flattens crops like hail.

Truly only the usurer is twice blessed and the throned monarch is unthroned.

Usury the usurers crown of gold, our crown remains of thorns.

New suitors of title ´Masters of the Universe´.
Not Belmont's fair Portia sought.
Porches and financial instruments of many more horse-power, torque of Twisted vigour.

No longer metaphors of Gold for gaining man's desire,
Or of Silver and it's just deserts.
Always Lead and usurious alchemy, hearts now made of stone.

failed suit of Morocco,
return and count revenues from the Sookes.
Failed suit of Aragon, beware robbers from Flanders with heavy denier stockinged masques.

Seek inside your own Bossanio, rejecting usury´s gold, hard food of Midas.
Tween Man and man no usury.
Plain lead and recognise money's deceit.

As Portia's counterfeit, redeemed in marriage.
So too should all value tokens declare the facsimile of exchange they truly be.
Money a true handshake in honour alone.

The courtiers of the Exchequer address the king;

We economists, beholden as we are to the princes of usury and as the false prophets of usury.
We fit the horse foot to the shoe that suits us best. It matters not that the horse becomes lame and less furlongs are plowed. As we deny the poison in our own usurious medium. We also deny that what ills our patient, could be from any panacea concocted in our own alchemist's crucible.

Our unit of account, that is to say, this store of value.
Not to leave unsaid, this medium of exchange.
Our scarlet pimpernel which no one quite pins down.
We say; "we give you something, always the same fungible with each the other. The one whole. Held in safe keeping, returned. What we call these claims or, definitions of claims. These bundles of demands is money.

Insinuated into civil intercourse, ubiquitous in the machinery of community,
deployed as a lever and pulley in affairs of state.
A measure of nothing conjured to divine what's important.

COUNSEL FOR THE PEOPLE CHARGE USURY OF ITS CRIMES.

This baron abstract that claims fruit.
This heavy invisible burden,
a yoke. Fashioned in language, felt but never seen.

inflicting scars as deep as any lash,
claiming lives as real as any canon.
This nightmare device of imagination.
Who are the slayers of this mythical dragon?

Coleridge saw beauty in nature where sweet amaranths bloom.
And Shakespeare compared his summer's day.
What of this hamlet's ghost of a specter?
something is rotten in the Danegeld,
many more promises are written than can be kept.

So much nectar strained from thin broth,
which bargains can be made?
When the music stops and the dancers sit down. Chairs are our metaphor for the real.
Always too few.

Rascals become clothed in robes and honesty is reduced to rags.
Elisabeth Lease had a purchase on truth.
"When people starve how can overproduction stand charged? It is money promises, kept short in supply that causes starvation. The consumption in the lungs of the community is the usurers confection.

A counterfeit Nobel laureate, there's an irony.
Denies that in money there can be a place that Gertrude Stein called there, home once but no longer there, there in Oakland. A precursor to some subprime heritage.
A speaker of truth to power could follow Pauli ´Das ist nicht nur nicht richtig, es is nicht einmal falsh!

Not even wrong, not even there.
All counterfeit, yet to counterfeit the counterfeit? a crime.
What of the shepherd of this unruly nothing,
where will they pen and fence this pack of wolves?
Will they dress this pack of cards in sheep's clothing?
Limit the herd a need for Golden standards.

Prudence of sound Money and even sounder usury.
Fix the price and patronise those who will honour the thievery. A mechanism to harmonise silent ballot boxes.
A gentleman from Belgium would complement his single currency. Unruled and unruly sets a course for austerity on a continent many times at war. A fight of 11 rounds.

Spread like a cancer through the development of continents, enabling the killing called wars. That increase the debt and centralise the money power.
Quiggly shewed the tragedy, little hope it seemed, blind faith in capitalism's harlot. That Babylonian whore.

At first a mere money trick for ragged trousered philanthropy. With usury, take away what's not even yet been paid. Ruskin would see wealth as that which is valuable in the hands of the valiant. Real goods sustain and wealth succors. Usurious money is but an unmade claim and worse. No banker has earned that newly minted note that hangs discordant in the air, as apt to rob as to pay.

How obscure this obscurant cult of Mammon.
What smoke-screened hall of mirrors.
How obese and gluttonous the leviathan of usury.
Austerity for the likes of you and I.
More banqueting and evacuated vomit spews from the sceptered top table. Corrupt in patronage and jealousy of power. Overstuffed with greed and thirsty for more.

How mean the jealousy of greed grows?
As more wants more and demands all.
The truly poor are those who desire much,
oppressive wealth no longer is, it only has.
Usury consumes the usurer, no self just an exponential nothing. Growing ever more grotesque in a shadow of what never was and never could be.

A doom-laden ring of the Nibelungs slained by Teutonic nobles and routed by heroic Norsemen.
The paper money shrouds the rock of Prometheus and still he forgets in whose promises the usurers truck.

A Semiotic Turn Wenzels genuinely fake.

A language of abstract form commemorates brotherhood.

Van Meegrans supper at Emmaus implies Vermeer's intention for experts to divine. A counterfeit of that which never had been, claimed as real and must be from the brush of the master. A looting tyranny coveting the genuine fakery like so much gold pulled from the mouths of corpses. Like so many rabbits out of so many hats and the goldfish does not know the water it swims in until the surface is broken.

The beauty of dying lilies, the artist petrifies the fleeting moment and time is solidified.A promise solidified in time measured in life and nonexistence. Celebrate Les Miserables of L'Argent . Hugo, Zola and Proudhon scream.

A promise wrapped up in a lie claiming existence where no air remains to breathe or, food to sustain. Asking everything for giving nothing. A mountebank by nature, a swindle made official by the state. To enslave the masses and keep them in want.

CONCLUDING PRAYER.

A central lack of fiber. Either moral or physical around which myths of debt are spun. As spiders spin webs and weavers warp cloth. Spartan Ephors of prudence pass judgment on all and stand above and astride the law. Dispensing injustice and taking clothes off the backs of The freezing and food out of the mouths of the hungry. Passing judgment on those who perform real work, asking always for more, and demanding to pay less.

So draw the bow of truth with intentness in the eye,

Seek out the irreducible posits, the epistemological gods of Homer. If there be one free miracle let the ephors explain the rest. What is this power of usury? Where did this power come from? Who is it exercised for and to whom do you ephors of usury answer to? And now let me ask. How do we take this power away? Only then we shall see good faith and brotherhood restored to the commons.

©Roger G Lewis 2016

21

Chapter 21

Bourgeois resolution.

A poem in Three Voices for added 4th part Harmony.

Synthesis Speaks to introduce, And Thesis, Anti Thesis and Synthesis dialogue
The conversation revolves and we find Revolution plagiarizes past mistakes.
In Consensus the three Voices resolve and entreat your contribution dear reader for a fourth part, shall we harmonise.

Synthesis.

Start here with your own experience. Bring here your open mind and trust your instinctive feeling for truth.

As resolution of discord demands a return to the tonic. The Tonic for our dissonant condition is a harmonic resolution to the Chord of Nature.

∮6/8 bb :

Thesis.

In a diary of a nobody, Mr Pooter, is every-man and woman. Striving.
Petite Bourgeois, discordant with their lot, in earnest to impress.

Anti Thesis

Life liberty and the pursuit of happiness, inalienable rights , the laws of Nature and of natures god.A constitution written for a usurping class, claiming authority, a reflection of common sense, and pained to see. This revolution of , by and for Whom?

Synthesis.

As the victor writes history so the powerful pass laws to satisfy their own ends. Power only represents the powerful.

Moyenne Bourgeois and Grande

Haute Bourgeois. A Class cuisine, Escoffier
Classical Aspiration. One acquires,
A bourgeois aesthetic, Petite Bourgeois Sycophancy.

Will the Chef of the constitution,
Taste his own cooking.
Does he as a class walk the walk and talk the talk
Or is it ; do as I say and not as I do.
An appeal always made, at once to Authority.Follow faithfully, blindly.

Ask they who would your bidding do. Listen to your life's story,
History, His History will not be yours. Be heard.

Pygmalion's elocution for the ordinaire.
Les rois et philosophes merde-et ainsi de faire des dames. Conventional pieties of the extraordinaire, Elite.

Écoute Et Répète, Listen and repeat
Learn by rote and do not question,
To Each that has shall be given,
those who hath not will be punished,
Know one's betters and issue scripted speech when spoken to, Obsequious.

Do not Blanche before appearances of grandeur.
Pompous ceremony seeks to silence chafing curiosity.

How readily the pecking order has regiments in line, volunteers to a false consciousness of liberation by society's consumptive ills, Polysemous

At the sign, Obey and join the queue. Wait your turn and receive your due. Punch the clock and Answer the bell. Ask not for whom the bell tolls, The bell rings the benefit makes a gift of what is rightfully yours.

The hand that gives also takes away. Often the gift merely returns that which was stolen from you.

Citizens within a polity, city-state
yet the peasants range free of sophistry Freemen in the confined spaces offer conformity to the graduated mould.

Glamorous flashing city lights
Suburbia within commute of higher Dreams. A stairway to real Estate heaven. The only Ladder, oh to be upon the bottom rung and rise. Dreams for mortgage, no hostage to Fortune.

Sophistication often masques ignorance. The humble and rustic often belies an appreciation of what truly is.

Calliopsis or Magnesia where poets slave to familiar rhymes and themes
Not golden or silver words but workmanlike fashion hymns of safe iron and copper.

On The city on the hill,
Songs sung to green and pleasant lands
My Country Right or wrong
Patriotic duty, above the evidence heroic deeds, laurels earned
Myths of Wagnerian operatic spectacle.

Behind the claimed reality of how things are lies a deeper truth clothed in the noble lie. He deceived by the noble lie is excluded as unworthy of an opinion.

Where Stockholm once commanded
St-Petersberg in that peculiar syndrome did the people know of freedom, which noble lies will accommodate the others, too Slumber.

A common purpose, to ideals, Shared and narrated from Cradle to grave.

History written in our victorious mood
Always times distant, always yesterday
A better day, a past nostalgic searching
For a future, yet to become tomorrow.

Being keen to please and seeking approval from authority feeds ego and starves the real self.

An irony of words pretending a meaning which no longer holds and yet serves to bind a convention, a grip that hampers the gait, Barre the pedestrian.

Witty Double entendre to pacify, Laughing at the otherness, not of our own genre. Bending of wills or an ends of a means which makes a meaner mind, setting examples
Cruelty for kindness's sake, who´s End?

The devil takes the hindmost. Trampling upon the unfortunate excuses of elitist privilege. There but for the grace of privilege go they!

Self-censored by a Mean temperament
no longer just and a bespoke Key
The city gates envelop to constrain
Invention, no longer a prize, only too fit.

Which mode of government befitting
The cadence of Timocracy, Oligarchy
, or the tyranny of democracy, Which?
A key to unlock the wealth of timbre
Trusting in the chastity of greed
the diabolos in musica. Descend below.

Discord or overbalance corrects naturally. In a system where gross imbalance and discord is evident are we to believe that harmony was ever thus?

As poets slave to the set rhythm
so a ruling Class Slaves to support its very tyranny, no purpose theirs, tis only to own be owned and Owe.

There is no Alternative, leave behind your Utopian dreams of youth, Grown, reality demands that you sing Our democratic song making it your own.
No third , way. Just the chord of power.
Ambiguous, A Capitalist mode production.

Power is an end in itself.
Seeking power to reform injustice is a contradiction in terms.
For harmonious consensus all voices must strike a chord.

Oh such discordance felt heard seen demanding resolution. Harmonies equal in temperament to guide back home to the unity. One full revolution

Tracing the musical image in Camra obscura, inverted and opposite, do you see what it is yet
As the tonic marks a tranquil resting place so conformity leaves us resolved
resiled and not reconciled Trapped

Power relations beget power relations, As the wheel of history turns repeating mistakes of previous revolutions.

As the wheel turns a revolution
as a harmony resolves Resolution
A new hub for human consciousness.
Not the machine now but organic.

Yours to follow little people
Know your place and praise
Elite heroes, distant an shimmering
As all mirages inspire the thirsty to crawl into the oasis of illusion squeezing blood from exhausted humanity.

As resolution of discord demands a return to the tonic. The Tonic for our dissonant condition is a harmonic resolution to the Chord of Nature.

The conversation has revolved and we find Revolution plagiarized its past mistakes.
In Consensus the three Voices resolve and with your contribution dear reader a fourth part, harmonised. Or perhaps we as yet have to find a resolution, play on, and seek new voices for our symphony of freedom is not yet written and least wise played freely with authentic joy.

Others we invite TO,

Start here with your own experience. Bring here your open mind and trust your instinctive feeling for truth. :D.S. $\oint$
::

22

Chapter 22

”The reader of Pope, as of every author, is advised to begin by letting him say what he has to say, in his own manner to an open mind that seeks only to receive the impressions which the writer wishes to convey. First let the mind and spirit of the writer come into free, full contact with the mind and spirit of the reader, whose attitude at the first reading should be simply receptive. Such reading is the condition precedent to all true judgment of a writer’s work. All criticism that is not so grounded spreads as fog over a poet’s page. Read, reader, for yourself, without once pausing to remember what you have been told to think˝.

Henry Morley.

Globalisation Un-Entangled.

```
the idea before it was clothed in words
```

heard in minds, as uttered thought the communication of arranged ideas
Thoughts lifting mist from the poet´s page.

To set the stage, not in the round
but, to see the scene in the sphere
Which actors will the playwright lay on the page´s narrative to steer.

Which course to meet who to set upon the bridge
For strength of Bulls Wall Street of Bears & onion domes upon our chart

A heroes pride found in Britannia's isles
Monks ´´sans humilite´´ fane ease
Like Pope we find our actors
´´All, all alike, find reason on their side´´

mais par impatience de souffrir
On the present discontents, Burke opined
Putin ,Trump and Farage set courses un-entangled Junker , Merkel, Call for straight ahead.

Few are the partisans of departed tyranny of Globalism or Nationalism which be the tyrant?

Yet passions are deceiving someone,
so near 50 years behindhand a hero fell.
"On this day, the day of March in my opinion´´, is the end of the United States of America
as the land of the free
and the home of the brave."

Eliza with Rogerian inscrutability hears the confession of the mal-contents
A mirror held up before cosmetic application
Globalisation and Internationalism confused despotism´s nature is to abhor any say save that of its own momentary pleasure;

it annihilates all intermediate situations between boundless strength on its own part,
and total debility on the part of the people.

Our education can be Our? our, government.
Our reason can be our Judge, of the rivals;
Globalism, Authority, coercion and competition.
or Nationalism, Internationalism, Cooperation.

Are we to have free will and democracy
Will we have determined authority
A struggle of ideals an ancient quarrel
Parmenides or Heraclitus navigators both
If centuries be epochs with peculiar discretion
19th, 20th, 21st a behind hand review
19th innate goodness of man, nationalism

20th Fallen man Calvinist rule, Globalism.

For the 21st partisans for patronage
Putin and the bear Nationalism
Trump and the Eagle InterNationalism
Corbyn of the uncommon people interNationalism
Farage of the common people Nationalism
Well May? You ask Globalism, Atlanticism
Within the Elysian bosom suckling Globalism on the right and Internationalism on the left restricted by two tits. A binary mammary conundrum, for PIIGS have many teets. On which teet will elites suckle,
ONLY formula for the masses.

From good men and bad society, to bad men and good society from optimism to pessimism and from secularism to religion. Creative destruction Globalisation?

```
The Simple see war is simply a football match conducted with cannons.wise men look not In  Nietzsche's Will to Power, but In the custom house.Says Bernard Shaw
```

shadows cast from secret whispers taps on streams of digital Imprints what oppressor does not despise
what oppression will not censor and misdirect

Secretive cabals of liberal political correctness
Self censored fearing the exile of dissent
GCHQ Nsa Kvd , hacking whose democracy
What democracy sings with the voice of explosions?

Tripartite accords of old, a Gold Standard
As Piggs Shit Brics and Lutheran Shards
profer Gaping anuses and Calvinist certainties
Divine providence and eminent domain democracy perverted.
Union now as then in ´38, current quarrels
Mr Streit's Union and Mr Orwells Niggers
Not counting Niggers, the other´s not like us
six hundred million disenfranchised, is it more today?

Russia is brazenly refusing to learn from the EU's mistakes and may walk directly into its trap
How can banking union serve the tributaries of society. Pigs do not fly nor water flow up hill

Real brothers can curse each other, friends.
Someday. Britannia will give Columbia a piece of her mind, Elysium also needs telling and she is curiously afflicted offering no teet for the eastern bear.

an exasperated Englishman: "I pray to God
they keep out of the end of this war anyhow.
We shall never hear the last of it if they don't...."
Cabalists, Gnostics, Manichaeans, the Old Man of the Mountains, Knight Templars, Satanists, Rosicrucians, Illuminati, Freemasons, Rousseau,

Voltaire, Cagliostro, Madame Blavatsky, Mrs. Besant,
Trade Unions, Anarchists, Socialists, Theosophists,
Communists, Those Bolsheviks, a frightful horde all plotting and getting hold of power and handing it on and doing down Christianity and the Christian life

THREE FACTORS IN EVERYONE SIR ARTHUR SALTER,

FOR EXAMPLE "SHALL WE NEVER PLUCK THE BEST FROM FATE

AND FIND THE GOLDEN MEAN? MUST WE EVER CHOOSE FREEDOM WITHOUT ORDER, OR ORDER WITHOUT FREEDOM? MUST JUSTICE AND MERCY BRING ALWAYS WEAKNESS IN THEIR TRAIN, AND STRENGTH BRING TYRANNY? NOT ONE OF THE EDUCATIONAL CO-ORDINATORS IN UTOPIA HE, OR IS ELYSISUM BODICCEA DISGUISED.

Climate Change, political Change bedfellows both the world's biggest polluter, backs the Protocol is it because they want control of emissions quotas
The imperialist philosophy behind Kyoto?

Not one of the claims contained in the Kyoto Protocol this "scientific" theory on which they are based have been confirmed by real facts. Extreme natural occurrences are not becoming more frequent,
and there has been no increase in infectious diseases.
Unless one sees Globalist imperialism as infectious.

The proposals to change the current state of affairs – included in the rejected European Constitution or in the not much different Lisbon Treaty – would make this defect even worse. Since there is no European demos –
and no European nation – this defect cannot be solved by strengthening the role of the European Parliament, either
In practice, the existence of euro has shown that forcing an economically disparate Europe into a homogeneous entity through a political decision is political engineering par excellence, far from beneficial for all countries concerned

"Environmentalism should belong in the social sciences"
along with other "isms" such as communism, feminism, and liberalism.
Klaus said that "environmentalism is a religion" and, answering questions of U.S. Congressmen, a "modern counterpart of communism" that seeks to change peoples' habits and economic systems.
Blue Planet in Green Shackles, Vaclav Klaus

Financial Institutions,Environmental groups Fossil fuel companies
Alternative energy companies Nuclear energy companies Traditional retailers and marketers governments might use global warming as a rationale for additional taxes

A central theme , Belief? To coalesce focus Climate, Liberal democracy, money
Abstractions of devotion Scientism Catechism
each opinion, certain facts codified worshiped

HACKING THE FACTS, PSEUDO SCIENCE

FAKE NEWS, POST TRUTH , HERETICAL
IGNORANCE ALLOWED BLIND FAITH AND DEVOTED TO THE PROPAGANDA ABSURD BLINDNESS

ESCHATOLOGY END TIMES PROPHESY
PROBLEM REACTION SOLUTION
SCARE THE SHIT OUT OF EM ASND KEEP EM POOR
CALVIN SAID Belloc characterised the reformation as ´´a rising of the rich against the poor´´,
´and indeed Calvin had written the unfortunate statement:
´´The people must always be kept in poverty in order that they remain obedient´´.

CONTINUITY OF GOVERNEMENT COG
COUPS NO LONGER NECESSARY OUT OF TIME ORDER OR SEQUENCE
THE DNA OF GOVENENACE SEEMS ORDAINED

> A taste of the ideas doing the rounds in Obama circles is offered by a recent report from the Managing Global In-security project, whose small US advisory group includes John Podesta, the man heading Mr Obama's transition team and Strobe Talbott, the president of the Brookings Institution, from which Ms Rice has just emerged.´´

THINGS TWICE , I SAID IT ONCE
Replace "Obama" with "Hitler", and you have the original. It's from Milton Mayer's classic They Thought They Were Free: The Germans, 1933-45, and the words are those of a university colleague of the author, explaining "the ever widening gap, after 1933, between the government and the people."

Just the place for a Snark! I have said it twice:
That alone should encourage the crew.
Just the place for a Snark! I have said it thrice:
What I tell you three times is true.

WHAT'S THE GOOD OF MERCATOR'S NORTH POLES AND EQUATORS,

TROPICS, ZONES, AND MERIDIAN LINES?"

SO THE BELLMAN WOULD CRY: AND THE CREW WOULD REPLY

"THEY ARE MERELY CONVENTIONAL SIGNS!